LYNN WOMAN LASHES MAN IN DEFENCE OF PET POODLE 'CUTEY'

Miss Nellie Ovid, of Lynn, who whipped Leo Smoke for throwing stones at her dog, and her prize French poodle.

Miss Nellie Ovid, twenty-two, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Henry Ovid of No. 21 Johnson street, Lynn, today soundly whipped Leo Smoke, forty-three, caretaker of the Lynn City Hall, for throwing stones at her prize French poodle "Cutey."

The whipping took place on the lawn in front of the City Hall in Johnson street, Lynn. Miss Ovid had "Cutey" out for an airing. The dog ran across the lawn and according to Miss Ovid, Smoke threw stones at her pet.

Miss Ovid remonstrated with Smoke and she says he seized her arm. As he did she struck him several times across the face and neck with the heavy leash she carried. The blows left several red welts on Smoke's face. Miss Ovid then reported what had happened to the police and begged protection from Smoke.

"That man has been trying to flirt with me for two or three weeks," she said. "I refused to have anything to do with him and he threw stones at 'Cutey' to get even with me."

"Cutey" is a trained French poodle, capable of doing many tricks and has won several prizes. Miss Ovid says Vincent Astor has offered her $2,000 for the dog.

Miss Ovid is preparing to enter grand opera. She is studying under private tutors and expects to make a name for herself in the musical world. Her one ambition, however, is to be able to support her father, who was incapacitated by a shock following a fire in the Ovid home in Lynn last December.

Poor Girl Leads Old 'Blue Blood' Colony

BAYSIDE, L. I., Sept. 21.—Miss Catherine Reade, whose father goes to work in overalls and is proud of it, may be elected "queen" of Bayside, in spite of the fact that her rivals are "blue bloods." Some "grande dames" have suggested Miss Reade to withdraw from a contest now going on, but Miss Reade, whose vote total is now by far the largest, smiled sweetly and refused. Her nearest rival is Miss May Van Sicler, daughter of W. Alonzo Van Sicler, whose family had to kill off a few Indians before building their first log cabin here.

Picking of G. O. P. Slate Denounced by A. P. Langtry

It has come to my attention that a member of the Republican State Committee has sent out a slate for Republicans to vote for at the primaries on Tuesday. (And I have received one of the machine made cards.) In my opinion this is an outrageous violation of the principles of fair play.

It has been the boast of the Republican party that while the Democratic and Progressive State tickets have been hand-picked, the Republican voters have been left free to make their own selections. I sincerely hope at the primary that the Republican voters will resent this attempt at dictation.

—From statement by A. P. Langtry, former Secretary of State.

BRAVES GO AFTER PIRATES

Would Abolish Labor Board

BRAVES IN SPRINT FOR FLAG

By NICK FLATLEY.

The opening of the last complete home-week of the season for the wonderful Braves finds the team with a clear lead of three games, with a string of star pitchers all to the best of shape and with an aggregation of fighters, one and all, convinced that nothing can prevent their getting away with the pennant.

They tackle the Pirates again today, with either Dick Rudolph or Lefty Tyler as the likely pitching possibilities. The southpaw would be the natural selection were it not for the fact that he had to work three innings Saturday, and consequently may be given a rest until tomorrow by Joe Stallings.

"Little Dick" has won his four starts since the team returned from the trails a couple of weeks back, and so he has rested since Thursday should be ready again today to give his usual good account of himself.

For the Pirates, Harmon or McQuillen are the most likely prospects, with the chances favoring the former.

TWENTY MORE TO PLAY.

Gameness and continually improving team work have made it a foregone conclusion that the Braves will not blow up in the last bitter spurt to the end, which is now little more than two weeks off.

The leaders are now favorites for the final victory 10 to 6 here in Boston and 2 to 1 in New York, the home of the only team that can be seriously considered a contender—the Giants.

With twenty games ahead of them, as against the nineteen for the champions of the past three seasons, the Braves, with an even break in luck, should not be seriously bothered keeping out there in the front.

The Giants play all their remaining games at home, and this may benefit them a little, though as a

THURSTON DEFENDANT IN ACTION

Alonzo B. Cook, candidate for the Republican nomination for State Auditor, today filed with the Sheriff of Suffolk County a writ preceding a damage suit for $50,000 against Chairman Edward A. Thurston of the Republican State Committee. The case is an action of damages for alleged various defamatory statements and utterances about Cook which he says emanated from Thurston.

The filing of the suit on the eve of the primaries caused much excitement in Republican circles. Attorney Charles H. Dow is representing Mr. Cook. Mr. Cook is also a lawyer with offices in the Old South building. In explanation of the suit he said today:

"Despite Chairman Thurston's statement that the Republican State Committee had no slate for the primary election, he has done everything possible by word of mouth and in letters to the press to hinder my candidacy.

"The trouble started just a month ago today when I refused Mr. Thurston's invitation to withdraw my candidacy. At that time he said if I did not withdraw he would immediately assail me at three different outings of clubs and in a Boston paper the following Sunday.

A. F. OF L. ATTACKS ON DOYLE

President Edward F. Alden, in his address at the opening of the twenty-ninth annual convention of the Massachusetts State Branch of the A. F of L., today, declared the State Board of Labor and Industries should be abolished and the department placed in charge of a commissioner who is a bona-fide labor man.

President Alden also scored Senator Andrew P. Doyle of New Bedford for his antagonistic attitude toward labor measures on Beacon Hill and urged the convention to support former Senator Samuel Ross, who is seeking the congressional nomination in the sixteenth district.

More than 300 delegates, including thirty women, were present when the convention was called to order in Musicians Building. Addresses of welcome were made by Lieutenant-Governor Barry, Mayor Curley, State Treasurer Frederick W. Mansfield and William Kobbe, president of the Boston Central Labor Union.

After delivering his annual report, which including a synopsis of the political life of Senator Doyle, President Alden said:

"It seems to me that the workers of all crafts should commence a campaign for Senator Doyle's ultimate removal from political life. If labor is not going to rebuke those who betray it, how it is going to maintain its prestige and defeat those not members of organized labor, who refuse to vote for our legislation?

"The State Board of Labor and Industries has not given labor a square deal. I believe the commission should be abolished and the affairs of the entire department placed under the control of a commissioner. The law should be amended, also, to specify the commissioner be a bona-fide labor man."

Lieutenant-Governor Barry said:

"Thank God the day has come when trade workers in Massachusetts are recognized and appreciated for their whole worth as true American citizens. The entire State administration from Governor Walsh down is in full accord with the high ideals of State labor."

Mayor Curley said:

"Only today I learned of the strike of the coopers at the American Sugar Refinery plant at South Boston, and I promise you I will do everything in my power to bring about a conference between the heads of the sugar company and representatives of the unions to see if the sugar trust, which is making more than 200 per cent. profit since the outbreak of the war, cannot pay the coopers more than sixteen cents an hour."

State Treasurer Mansfield recommended the substitution of an eight-hour-a-day bill for women for the present fifty-hour hours a week law.

At adjournment the delegates and friends went to Nantasket. A supper and grand ball is to be held in their honor tonight at the New Rockland House.

BAYONET CHARGE OF GERMAN ARMY MEETS REPULSE

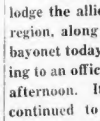
By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK,
Special Correspondent of the American.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—In desperate attempts to dislodge the allies from their positions in the Craonne region, along the Aisne, the Germans resorted to the bayonet today, but were repulsed at all points, according to an official announcement issued at 3 o'clock this afternoon. It was also announced that the Germans continued to bombard the French troops around Rheims and that the French were making progress on the right bank of the Oise River.

An officer who has just returned from Soissons states that an aerial scout saw a large portion of the German army retiring.

The official statement follows:

OFFICIAL.



French Coat of Arms.

1.—On our left wing, on the right bank of the Oise, we have advanced to the heights of Lassigny (west of Noyon) east of the Oise and to the north of the Aisne the Germans have shown an increase in activity. Violent attacks turning into bayonet charges have been delivered in the region of Craonne. The enemy has been repulsed at all points with considerable losses.

2.—Around Rheims the enemy has made no infantry attack, but has confined his efforts to bombarding our front with his heavy pieces.

3.—At the centre, in Champagne, and on the west side of the Argonne, beyond Souain, we have taken Nesmilleshurlus and Massiges.

4.—In the Woevre region the enemy holds the region of Thiaucourt and has bombarded Hasson-Chatel.

5.—On the right wing (Lorraine and the Vosges) there is no change. The Germans are fortifying themselves on Delmiet hill south of Chateau-Salins.

With Rheims and Soissons burning, and being battered to pieces by German artillery, the sixth day of the great battle of the Aisne began with both the invaders and the allies bringing huge bodies of infantry into action, according to today's dispatches from Paris. Details of today's fighting are given in the following cable:

PARIS, Sept. 21.—The arrival of German reinforcements, estimated in number at 100,000 men, resulted in the invaders taking the offensive at several points, and it was necessary for

REFUGEES HOME ON PRETORIAN

A number of American refugees landed today when the Pretorian of the Allan line docked at Mystic Wharf. She had 219 passengers with 99 steerage. Among those who were in the war zone on our Professor R. C. Line of Mr. Holyoke College, who, with other Americans, was attending the Summer courses at the University, when the war broke out.

"All of us who were in Freiburg, south of Baden and right near the Alsace border, heard the roar of guns at the battle of Mulhausen," said the professor.

"At Alsace, where the first real battle between Germans and French was fought, we saw much of the effects of the war. On the first day we saw 150 wounded Germans brought in, which number was increased to 600 forming the second day, and then came many French prisoners.

TAKEN AS BRITISH SPY

"During the first week of the war I was arrested about three times as a spy on account of my English speech, but I established my identity with my papers. Then came the final suspicion again when I took a little German child with me whenever I went walking, and this little child led me safely through the city.

"There was much bitterness expressed in the German newspapers because the citizens of Baden and Alsace gave food through car windows to French prisoners of war. It made a ream of talk for sometime without any effect.

"I saw two Russians arrested as spies while were trying to obtain the water works of the city. Two French, disguised as nuns and doing much spying out, were afterwards shot.

"We had to stay sometime at Freiburg after the war broke out. Then about a hundred Americans, who were marooned there, formed a train. Our troubles then began. It took us twenty-one days to make what is usually done in seven hours. We wanted to get to Frankfurt and got there after many delays and then took a freight barge boat, drifted down the Rhine to Holland to Rotterdam we took a boat to one of the English channel towns.

"While on the Rhine we saw several Zeppelins and aeroplanes hovering over Holland."

EXCITEMENT IN BERLIN.

P. W. Nicolaus of Rush City, Minn., who, with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Nicolaus, left Berlin September 1, had many experiences of being held up.

Mr. P. W. Nicolaus said: "There was great deal of excitement in Berlin during the first week after war was proclaimed. But after that it became quiet. Americans received very courtesy from the Germans. Burgomeister W. E. Wermuth and his assistants were very considerate of our needs. Even when the anti-war sentiment from America reached Berlin we discovered no difference in the air of kindness rendered us.

"My father, after getting into England, on account of his German birth, though he has been a naturalized American citizen for some time, had some trouble, and was reported as a spy to the police of the English town where we were staying for a short time. But on his naturalization papers with him and that saved him any further trouble.

"We had some German newspapers tucked in our travelling bags. These were all taken. We are highly glad to get back to America."

Heavy Fire Checks Aid for Wounded

PARIS, Sept. 21.—On account of the incessing fire in the battlefield along the Aisne many wounded are lying where they fell. The Red Cross ambulances could not venture out to pick them up because of the heavy fire. Around Soissons are helping the men bury corpses. The streets of Bemlis are full of mounds, each elevation marking the grave of a French, British or German soldier. They are unnamed and in the official reports of the government they go down as "missing."

French Take Auto Packed With Bombs

PARIS, Sept. 21.—An astonishing story comes from Rouen of the capture there of an automobile bearing a party of German engineers and packed with bombs after an exciting cross-country chase from Lyons. The bombs were intended for blowing up railroads and bridges. The chase was a running fight, in which two Germans and three Frenchmen were mortally wounded before the Germans were caught.

MISS ALICE DREVET, whose French sympathies will not prevent her marriage to German sweetheart.

GERMAN WINS FRENCH HEART, DESPITE WAR

Let the cannons roar! Reinhard Burlein Bartels, German, and Alice Drevet, French, are to be married October 7, war or no war.

Bartels is the son of H. E. Bartels of Winchester, and is manager of the Bartels and Thelen shoe factory in Chelsea. Miss Drevet lives at No. 11 Maybrook street, Dorchester. Their romance goes back several years and this is the story.

While Miss Drevet and her mother were visiting a family at Ballard Hill, N. H., the Bartels' automobile broke down near the house, and young Bartels was forced to stay the night at the farmhouse where the Drevets were visiting. Next day, so the story goes, Bartels looked over the surrounding land, bought a lot across the way and determined to build a Summer place there.

The friendship between the two young people ripened in the vacation seasons, and during the Winter Bartels made many a Dorchester ward. Bartels, an athlete, but who gave up Harvard to go into business when his father's health failed, is a pronounced German type, while Miss Drevet is equally plainly French. On the tennis courts at Meredith, N. H., last week someone asked Bartels:

"Don't you and Miss Drevet quarrel about the war?"

"Oh, sure," he laughed. "But it doesn't make any difference."

They will be married October 7 by the Rev. F. A. Budlong at St. Mark's Congregational church, and will afterward live at Melrose Highlands.

OPEN CAMPAIGN ON SALOONS IN STATE TODAY

"To license the saloon and then punish drunkenness is as though we licensed the fish and then punished scratching."

This is Dr. Howard H. Russell's attitude toward the liquor traffic. Dr. Russell, an Ohio man and the founder of the Anti-Saloon League of America, is leading a host of no-license speakers, who, during the week, will conduct a sweeping campaign throughout Massachusetts. The campaign will start at Melrose, Monson and Palmer. Next Saturday and Sunday there will be meetings in Boston. Beside Dr. Russell, Congressman Hobson, Governor Glenn of North Carolina and Congressman-elect Davis of Texas will speak. The churches are supporting the campaign. A big meeting on Boston Common next Saturday will perhaps mark its climax, for Sunday there will be eighteen mass meetings.

Superintendent Arthur J. Davis of the Massachusetts Anti-Saloon League and Fred Lawton have arranged the campaign program.

CALLAHAN CLUB COMES OUT FOR PETER F. TAGUE

Peter F. Tague of Charlestown, candidate for Congress in the Tenth District, spent a very busy day visiting the different social organizations throughout the district.

Starting in East Boston, he made speeches at meetings in the following places: Iona Social Club, Fitton Athletic Club, Lamson Club, Murray Park Club and Jeffries Point Club. He next went to Charlestown, where he spoke to a large meeting of freight handlers at Mishawum Hall. Thomas Casey presided, and vice-president William O'Brien of the International Longshoremen's Union, spoke for Tague.

Mr. Tague then went to the Hendricks Club of Ward 8, where he was received by the largest meeting ever held by that organization, and the club voted to support his candidacy.

Martin M. Lomasney presided, introducing Tague as the next Congressman and asked all of the members to go out and get all the support they could for him.

Mr. Tague then visited Ward 2, and at a meeting of his friends in the ward was assured of a large vote. At a meeting of the Callahan Club of Ward 7, where Timothy J. Callahan presided, it was unanimously agreed to support Peter F. Tague.

Mr. Tague also received from Congressman Murray his assurance he was ready to stump the district with him tonight and also that he had received assurance from his supporters of the fact that they were all with Mr. Tague. Mr. Tague at all his meetings told these facts to his hearers and told them with the endorsements he had received he was sure of election.

STORY OF SHOOTING PROBED

SOUTH ATTLEBORO, Sept. 21.—While Mrs. Mary Boehnke, wife of one of the wealthy jewelry manufacturers here and daughter of another, lies at the Sturdy Hospital with a bullet wound under her heart, the police investigation today developed facts which led them to question the woman's story that she shot herself.

Mrs. Boehnke is twenty-five years old, wife of Arthur F. Boehnke and daughter of J. P. Inman of the Inman Jewelry Company. Mr. Boehnke is connected with the company.

About 11 o'clock last night J. W. Shaw heard a sound on the doorsten of his home on Tiffany street, went to the door and found Mrs. Boehnke lying there. She gasped "I—I shot myself."

Dr. Kent and Dr. Richardson, sent for by the hospital and police unsuccessfully for the bullet. She told this story.

"I had been visiting in West Barrington for some days, and on my way back stopped at a house in Providence. There I stole the revolver. I came to South Attleboro by car, walked on the street till I found a secluded spot, shot once into the air and then shot myself. Then I walked to Mr. Shaw's home. I had trouble."

The police found the front of her shirt waist burned, showing that the shot had been fired at close range. The woman's hair was torn and her clothing was disarranged. Investigating today they found the apparent scene of the shooting in a thicket fifty yards from the corner of Tiffany street and South avenue.

Here the revolver lay on the ground; there were footprints and signs of a struggle all about, and twenty feet away lay the holster which had contained the revolver. A broken haircomb lay near the revolver.

Mrs. Boehnke lives at No. 8 Third street, Attleboro.

Held for Fatal Card Game.

W. F. Fitzgerald Lauds "Buy a Bale of Cotton" Move

The way this country seems to be taking hold of the "buy a bale of cotton" idea to assist the South in its dilemma is one of the strong points of the situation. This splendid movement must be assisted and everybody who can should by voice and money show his good will and help to develop confidence and business expansion.

The chambers of commerce throughout the country should back this plan or submit a better one. The movement to buy cotton goods inaugurated by the daughter of Speaker Champ Clark would seem to be a sure way to prevent a congestion of stored cotton that later on might cause some demoralization.

Concerted action, intelligently guided, means prosperity for this country. Confidence is contagious.—William F. Fitzgerald of Fitzgerald, Hubbard & Co.

Brookline Woman's Auto Hits Two Men

Mrs. C. C. Palmer of No. 1122 Commonwealth avenue, Brookline, while driving her automobile through Lake Quinsigamond Park, Worcester, hit Salvatore Gonarelli and Frank Sereteo, both of East Central street, Worcester. Mrs. Palmer stopped her auto and sent her chauffeur to summon an ambulance. The men were not seriously hurt.

SHOE CONCERNS PURCHASE 100 COTTON BALES

The Thomas G. Plant Company, the Dorothy Dodd Shoe Company of Jamaica Plain have helped boost the "buy-a-bale-of-cotton" movement by jointly buying 100 bales direct from the cotton growers of the South, ten cents a pound.

The South is congested with cotton owing to the stoppage of exports to the war, and the growers are marketing in order to turn their bales into cash.

In organ business stimulation after the South is helping hand in the offering. Treasurer Frank R. Briggs of the Dorothy Dodd Shoe Company said today:

"Our company and the Plant company bought the 100 bales of cotton a week ago at the rate of ten cents a pound, as suggested by the Atlanta Georgian. The action by the Herald papers is timely and such. The South needs help and everybody ought to take hold.

"As a matter of fact it isn't all charity. We are using this business policy to help in this cotton purchase, because it will relieve a disagreeable situation in the South and stimulate business down there. We feel that the benefit is mutual. We have many customers down there who are affected.

"Farmers are using cotton instead of money to make purchases. The result is that many concerns are flooded with cotton when they need cash far more. The buy-a-bale movement will furnish cash which is badly needed.

"Realizing this, we arranged with salesmen and agents in the South to buy fifty bales from four of the large cities and with instructions that the cotton must come direct from the farmers and we bought fifty more bales on the basis of one bale from each of fifty small towns, to distribute our patronage. Other firms ought to try it. I see Armour bought 500 bales some days ago. Every northern firm doing business in the South ought to buy cotton bales. It will have a reactionary effect on business."

Alma Tell is going to withdraw her prize Pomeranian from the cast of "Peg o' My Heart." Miss Tell is the stately actress who plays Ethel in "Peg" and when she came to Boston to take the role she waved away the property dog furnished by the management.

Yesterday afternoon Tweewee encountered Mike, the Irish terrier carried by Peg in the play. Mike fell upon Tweewee. The Pomeranian had time to utter only one terrified squeal but it saved his life. The property man snatched him out of the jaws of Mike and restored him to his mistress. Miss Tell was indignant and then and there handed in Tweewee's resignation. In the future the property Pomeranian will be used.

It was a lucky thing for the young woman that Officers Forrest and Fleming were there to save her, for Miss Peterson alleges that the man struck her on the jaw and choked her into unconsciousness. She was then dragged to the side of the road, and would undoubtedly have been criminally assaulted but for the timely arrival of the officers.

As the result of a near-riot in Central square, East Boston, Saturday night, following a political rally, Joseph Pope and Michael J. Lyons were in the East Boston Court today. Pope, who lives on London street, was charged with drunkenness and attempting to rescue Lyons from an officer, and Lyons was charged with drunkenness. Both had their cases continued till Thursday. Lyons is alleged to have been interfering with Special Officer James H. Sreenan. Congressional candidate from Charlestown, was speaking from an automobile. Patrolman James King placed Lyons under arrest. Pope is alleged to have tried to free Lyons. A crowd of 1,000 surrounded the patrol wagon. Patrolman John Sullivan came to King's assistance. He arrested Pope. Then others on the outskirts got excited and began throwing things.

A pint flask full of whiskey struck Patrolman Sweeney's arm. He is at home today under a doctor's care.

Simple Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring, use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

FALL OPENING 1914

GOV. GLYNN SPEAKER AT BIG HEARST PEACE RALLY IN NEW YORK

Sign This and Mail It to the Boston American

PEACE EDITOR,
Boston American, Boston.

Please enroll my name on the world-wide committee to bring to a quick conclusion the terrible war now devastating Europe.

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

HEARST PEACE MOVE PRAISED BY MINISTER

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—In one of the mightiest demonstrations ever witnessed in New York, the people of this great city have registered a strikingly fervent protest against the war raging in Europe. More than 19,000 attended the great world-peace meeting in the Seventh Regiment Armory, held in connection with the movement inaugurated by the Hearst newspapers.

So tremendous were the crowds that the doors of the great armory had to be opened an hour and a half before the time announced, and when 10,000 had entered the hall and the doors were closed, more than 5,000 others stood in the street outside. The vast interior of the armory was a blaze of American flags, with great white flags of peace set here and there under the brilliant shine of electric lights.

The lilting of the Sixty-ninth Regiment Band, the playing of the Century Opera House Orchestra, the wonderful chorus of a thousand Washington Irving High School girls, all in white, and waving American flags and flags of peace while they sang the noble singing of the two distinguished prima donnas, Mme. Schumann-Heink and Mme. Gerville-Reache, the sight of the delegation of American sailors from the battleships Maine, Wyoming and Utah and the soldiers from the various forts around the city and the presence of notable men and women drawn from every walk of life, combined to make the spectacle marvelous.

GARY DEPLORES WAR.

Mr. Hearst's name was repeatedly and spontaneously applauded. Speaker Clark, Governor Glynn and other orators publicly bore witness to the national service rendered by him in organizing the popular American call for world peace. Elbert H. Gary, the temporary chairman, made the opening speech. He deplored the horrors of the war, saying that all of us are affected. "Our economic interests are jeopardized by the war," he said, "but our opposition to it, which is embodied in this meeting, stands on higher grounds.

"At least 15,000 men are being wounded and 5,500 lives destroyed daily," he said, "and if this is expected the number will be doubled on account of disease. The inconsolate mourners for the dead aggregate an increase of 12,500 for each day that passes, and the cost of the struggle is $2,500,000,000 a month.

"We do not undertake to pass judgment on the causes of the war, but trust that they will reach a speedy settlement. We are the friends of all and the enemies of none. We offer no assistance to one we do not offer to another, we pray for peace, honorable and lasting."

GLYNN APPLAUDED.

Governor Glynn, who followed, was introduced by Judge Gary as chairman of the evening. He was received with a hearty round of applause. He said in part:

"This is a wonderful gathering, my friends, in a wonderful cause. I congratulate the man and the newspapers that inaugurated it (applause) and I say to you that though the Hearst papers have done some things, he never did a better thing than this. (Applause).

"I do not believe that moral cannon rule the world.

"Though it goes in waves and with this world assemblage with all their powers concentrated on peace, praying for peace, hoping for peace, I think that that concentration will not only have an effect upon the three Powers above, but upon the hearts and minds of our brothers and our sisters beyond the seas.

"Our aid for mediation is offered, or, in one particular, to every nation, and when the time comes for our great President, Woodrow Wilson, to offer the assistance of his country in mediation, every man in the country, from William Randolph Hearst to the lowest digger in the ditch, will be found aiding him. Tonight Woodrow Wilson and William Randolph Hearst stand shoulder to shoulder for the peace of the world."

CHAMP CLARK BLUSHES.

Speaker Champ Clark slipped up to the stand before the audience spotted him. When his presence was announced, the applause aroused him enough to blush like a schoolboy.

"I do not believe," he told of his hope that at the conclusion of the war Congress should call upon the President of the country to request all the greatest foreign powers for a partial disarmament," the audience cheers unanimously.

Referring, when the Greeks rebelled against the Turks, Daniel Webster, in a memorable speech, appealed to the moral sentiment of the world—and that was never appealed to in vain—and that is precisely what this moment is doing here tonight, tonight, appealing to the moral sentiment of the world against human barbarity," said Mr. Clark, in concluding.

Scenes in what the vast meetings that have been held all over the country in behalf of the movement of William Randolph Hearst have been doing for several weeks and what they will continue to do until we make the American voice for peace heard across the sea.

"I have sublime faith that out of this war the permanent peace of the world will be wrought," asserted Vice-President Marshall. He added that the time was swiftly coming when all international disputes would be settled by arbitration.

Senator Reed, of Missouri, spoke of the horror of conflict and how much credit was due to the author of the present meeting for taking what steps he could to bring it to an end.

READ THIS SYNOPSIS FIRST.

Marta Galland and her mother live on the frontier between the country of the Browns and the country of the Grays. By their house winds a road through the pass in the range. To hold the pass is to hold the range.

Among the friends of the Gallands, two are prominent. One is Lanstron, the young chief of intelligence on the Brown general staff. The other is Westerling, vice-chief of staff of the Grays and actual chief in all but name, whose high rank Marta had predicted ten years before.

Marta, who has traveled round the world, is visiting the Gray capital, and Westerling calls upon her. She tells him that for nations to fight is as foolish as for neighbors to quarrel, and declares herself at war with all fighters.

She tells him that she is teaching a class of children at La Tir, near her home, to abhor war, and is making them take an oath that when they grow up they will never cross a frontier to kill their fellow men. She urges him to prevent a war between his country and her's, for she declares, "you are not ready."

Lanstron's visit to Marta are his holidays. At the tightening of the crisis between the countries he comes one day and finds the ladies absent. Strolling about the grounds he comes upon an old friend, disguised as a deaf gardener.

Marta returns and the Lanstron that the old gardener is not deaf and that he is a spy. Lanstron owns that it is true and leads her into a tunnel under the old castle. There, opening a secret panel and showing her a telephone, he explains its use. If war comes, he tells Marta, the Grays against their own 300,000, the Browns expect to be driven back from the frontier to their first line of defence, and Westerling will make the Galland house the Gray headquarters. He tells Marta that he loves her, but she is not ready to listen.

Westerling tells the Gray premier that if war comes he can guarantee victory if every resource of the nation be put at the command of the military.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"A condition," he announced. "From the moment war is declared I become master of all intelligence, all communication, all resources. Everything we require goes into the crucible."

"And the people are mischievous, greedy, but very useful press?" asked the premier.

"I also shall serve; also obey. No lists of killed and wounded shall be given out until I am ready. The public must know nothing except what I choose to tell. I act for the people and the nation."

"That is agreed," said the premier. "For these terrible weeks every nerve and muscle of the nation is at your service to win for the nation. In three or four days I shall know if the public rises to the call. If not"—

He shook his head.

"While all the information given out is provocative to our people, you will please have your staff and press bureau censor for peace that through the press."

Rev. Dr. George L. Cady, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Dorchester, urged all the ministers to observe Sunday, October 4, and said there was a prospect of Boston showing a great interest in the peace movement by a number of mass meetings on that day.

The committee appointed to prepare for the ministers' peace meeting consists of Rev. John L. Barton, D. D., of the American Board of Missions; Rev. W. L. Sperry, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Newbury street, and Rev. Dr. George L. Cady, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Dorchester.

* * * * *

Partow was a great brain sent on an enormous errand. Lanstron's eyes lit the fire of youth at sixty-five, but his pendulous flesh of his cheeks was pasty. Jealousy and ineffectuality deavored for years to remove him from his position at the head of the army on account of age. New governments decided as they came in that he must go, and they went out with him still in the saddle.

PARTOW INSCRUTABLE

Let officers apply themselves with conspicuous energy and they heard from a genial Partow; let officers only keep step and free of courts martial, and they heard from a merciless taskmaster. Peculiarly human, peculiarly dictatorial, dynamic, and inscrutable was Partow, who never asked any one under him to work harder than himself.

Lanston appeared in the presence of Jove shortly after 9 o'clock the next morning after he left La Tir. Jove rolled his big head on his short neck in a nod and said:

"Late!"

"The train was late, sir," Lanstron replied, "and I have some news about our thousandth chance."

"Him-m! What is it?" asked Partow. When Lanstron worked his lips in a way he had if he were struck by a passing reflection with the subject in hand. "Strange about her, when you consider who her parents were!" he said. "But you never know. Mm-m! Why don't you sit down, young man?"

"The way that the Grays gave out our dispatch convinces me of their intentions," Lanstron said. "Their people are rising to it and ours are rising in answer. The Grays have been transferring regiments from distant provinces to their frontier because this will fight better in an invasion. We are transferring home regiments to our frontier because they will fight for their own property. By Thursday you will find that open mobilization on both sides has begun."

"The department is ready," said Partow. "I will accept your decision about press censorship."

"A troublesome point," responded Lanstron. "I have procrastinated between two definite plans were fully worked out. It is a matter of choice between them; either publicity or complete secrecy. You know I am no believer in riding two horses at once. My mind is made up; but let me hear your side again. Sometimes I get conviction by probing another mind."

Lanstron was at his best, for his mental activity was intense.

"Of course they will go in for secrecy; but our case is different," he began.

Partow settled himself to listen with the gift of an organizer who draws from his informant the brevity of essentials.

LANSTRON'S PLAN

"I should take the people into our confidence," Lanstron proceeded. "I should make them feel that we were one family fighting for all we hold dear against the invader. If our losses are heavy, if we have a setback, then the inspiration of the heroism of those who have fallen and the danger of their own homes feeling the foot of the invader next will impel the living to greater sacrifices, for the Grays are in the wrong. The moral and the legal right is with us."

"Are the duty of men like you and, on occasion, for the purpose," said Partow, "is worthily to direct the courage that goes with moral right? The overt act of war must come from them by violating our frontier, not in the African jungle but here. Even when the burglar fingers the window-sash we shall not fire—no, not until he enters our house. When he does, you would have a message to go out to our people that will set them quivering with indignation?"

"Yes, and I would let the names of our soldiers who fall first be known and how they fell, their looks and their frontier homes and their faces to the front."

Our very liberality in giving news will help us to cover the military secrets which we desire to preserve," Partow said, with slow emphasis. "We shall hold back what we please, confident of the people's trust. Good-bye, that, yes! But enough! your orders are ready, in detail, I believe. You have nothing to add?"

"No, sir, nothing; at least, not until we begin."

"Very well. We shall have the orders issued at the proper moment," Partow concluded. "And Westerling is going to find," he proceeded after a thoughtful pause, "that a man is readier to die fighting to hold his own threshold than fighting to take another man's. War is not yet solely an affair of machinery and numbers. The human element is still supreme. You may see your hand—no, not that one, not the one you shake hands with—the one wounded in action!"

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

GERMAN ARMY MOVES ON IMPORTANT STRONGHOLD IN RUSSIAN POLAND

BERLIN CLAIMS NEW SUCCESSES IN FRANCE

the allies to bring forward heavy bodies of men to engage the German attacking forces.

The activity of the British and French around Soissons show that the allies are continuing their flanking movement against the troops of General von Kluck.

According to the official announcement the hardest fighting is in progress near Soissons on the extreme western end of the battle line and near Rheims in the centre.

ARTILLERY SILENCES BATTERIES.

The French have been able to move their heaviest artillery to the firing line east of Oise, near its junction with the Aisne, and a continuous night and day bombardment against the German positions is in progress. It is confidently believed by the French military authorities in Paris that the German positions can be so thoroughly weakened by the cannonade that the French and British will be able to sweep the Germans from their entrenchments at the point of the bayonet, despite the reinforcements.

Already, it is said, the French have been able to silence several of the German batteries at that point, compelling them to take up new positions.

Both Soissons and Rheims are reported to be flames. Soissons has been under fire since fighting in the present battle began; Rheims has been bombarded for eighty-four hours.

(Soissons is on the northwestern end of the battle line. It lies about fifty-miles northeast of Paris. Rheims is eighty-two miles east of Paris.)

GERMANS CLAIM SUCCESSES.

Farther to the east, near the Argonne district, in the Meuse valley and in the Vosges, the fighting is less severe, but is still going on.

The destruction along the valley of the Aisne is appalling. Wounded soldiers, returning officers and prisoners from the front describe the loss of life as colossal. The stretch of lowland between the hills flanking the Aisne is described as a valley of death and desolation.

Day and night the bombardment goes on until one wonders in amazement how the Germans are able to bring from their distant base of supplies sufficient ammunition necessary to keep their batteries in action all the time.

The German War Office claims that the Kaiser's troops are succeeding in a general offensive movement against the allies. The latest German official statement appears in the following dispatch:

KAISER'S TROOPS ON OFFENSIVE.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Sept. 21.—The following official statement covering the general situation in France was issued today:

"Success is meeting our offensive against the allied British and French forces. We are making progress at several points. Heavy rains for a few days compelled the German troops to withhold their attacks, but we are now moving forward with the enemy making an energetic defence.

"The reinforcements sent to the front have given a good account of themselves and have strengthened our lines by replacing the soldiers who were almost exhausted by the terrific strain under which they have been fighting for many days. Our artillery has again demonstrated its superiority.

"We have repulsed attacks made by French troops on Donon, near Saales, in the Central Vosges."

There is not any great change in the battle line, which still runs eastward from a point near Noyon along the Aisne, thence about four miles north of Rheims eastward through Varennes in the northern part of the Argonne district across the Meuse north of Verdun.

The battle has been swaying backward and forward without either side gaining a decisive success. At some points, notably east of the Oise, the Germans lost some of their positions, but at other points they gained, Paris dispatches say.

So far the fighting has been a fierce artillery duel partaking of some of the qualities of a siege. Now, however, with both sides beginning to use more and more infantry, the fighting should be near its end. The present week should see the tide of victory and defeat flowing in clearly marked channels.

More than 10,000 prisoners of war are now interned in Paris, all having been brought in within the past week.

The Germans are pushing their offensive into Russian Poland, moving on the important city of Grodno after taking several other towns on the frontier.

Frederick Werner writes from the German capital as follows:

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—Three German army corps (120,000 men) are marching on the Russian stronghold of Grodno, after capturing the towns of Augustowo, Szczuczyn and Grajevo, says an official announcement today.

Grodno is an important railway centre on the River Niemen. It is on the main line between Petrograd and Warsaw. The city is strongly fortified and is the capital of the government of Grodno.

The statement continues:

"The campaign of the eastern army continues successfully. Part of the Grodno army defeated by General Hindenberg has joined the fragments of the Vilna army and the two have fallen back on Grodno."

General Steinmetz and Count Rantzau, whose names are included in the latest list of dead, are said to have been killed in the east ern campaign.

RUSSIANS IN GALICIA CROSS VISTULA.

The following cable dispatches indicate the continued success of the Russian campaign in Galicia:

PETROGRAD, Sept. 21.—Heavy Russian siege guns are bombarding the two San River fortresses of Przemysl and Jaroslaw, it was officially announced today. Parts of both towns have already been set on fire.

Following up their success at Krasnezyn, only a few miles to the southwest of Przemysl, Russian soldiers have moved northwest and captured Dobiekeys, twenty-five miles west of Przemysl. This has bottled up in Przemysl 60,000 men under command of General DeColard. They must beat off the Russian attack or surrender.

At Dobiekeys and east of there the Russians captured large quantities of arms and ammunition.

The first and second Russian armies, operating in Galicia and southern Russian Poland, have effected a junction and part of them have already crossed the Vistula and San Rivers in force. With the investment of Jaroslaw and Przemysl, preventing any sorties from either stronghold, the Russians are now free to continue their advance toward Cracow.

Minister of War Sukhomlinoff today said:

"This is the crucial phase of the campaign. If we are successful we shall clear the way for our march into Silesia and all menace from Austria will be removed."

The Russian armies thus occupy a fan-shaped position from the Vistula to the southeast. They are moving with amazing rapidity considering the neutral difficulties with which they have to contend.

GLOOM IN AUSTRIAN CAPITAL.

VIENNA, via Berlin and Amsterdam, Sept. 21.—Gloom was caused here today by the official admission that the army of General Dankel has been compelled to take the defensive against the Russians in Galicia.

This was the first official admission that the Austrian arms have suffered any reverses in the fighting against Russia.

At the same time Field Marshal von Hoetzendorf, chief of the Austrian general staff, made public a report from General Dankel, praising the bravery of his troops, but explaining that the Russians had been encountered in overwhelming numbers.

HALL CAINE ASSAILS "GERMAN PAGANISM"

By HALL CAINE,
The Famous English Novelist and Publicist, to the American.

We hear in England that great numbers of the American people are now asking themselves, as they have never asked themselves before, if any cause, no matter what, if any provocation, no matter how grievous, is sufficient to justify warfare.

I thank God for that. During the past sixteen years the Peace Propaganda has made tremendous strides, not only in America, but throughout the world. I have myself done all I could to promote it. But nevertheless I find myself within the zone of the war spirit at this moment, and I ask permission to say why.

I see, perhaps as plainly as the strongest pacifist among you, that the theory of warfare is illogical and even stupid. Two nations, having a cause of quarrel which they cannot compose, submit the settlement to the arbitrament of physical force.

Does the nation which wins in war establish by its victory the principles it fought for? By no means. It establishes no more than the superiority of its arms. Does the nation which loses prove by its failure the falseness of the cause it champions? Indeed no. It proves nothing but its inability to hold on to the struggle. The right, as such, has nothing to do with the issue. The solution depends entirely upon might.

WAR FRANKLY PAGAN.

I see, too, perhaps as clearly as you do, that there was never anything more frankly pagan than this. It excludes the idea of a God who governs the world in justice and leaves the destiny of the nations in the control of a great immoral monster who must always be on the side of the big battalions, the money bags and the latest and deadliest development of the blunderbuss.

Again I see as plainly as you do, that when Christianity came into the world it met this pagan theory that Right is Might with an assertion of the moral law. Where Paganism had glorified power, Christianity championed weakness. And Christianity claimed to do this not on the lines of the moral law alone, but also on the lines of the only true and abiding law of life.

Above all I see, as you see, as all Christian people see, that the Founder of Christianity carried His opposition to physical force to the extreme limit of condemning all attempts at resisting evil. He submitted to violence in His own person and forbade His followers to draw the sword in His defence. The only effort He made to resist evil was in driving the buyers and sellers out of the Temple, and then He was not so much opposing constituted authority as asserting the separate rights of the soul.

He said, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." He said, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." He said, "Ye have heard that it hath been said, 'an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth,' but I say unto you that ye resist not evil, but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. And if any man shall sue thee at law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also."

MUST DEFEND FREEDOM.

Confronted by such an explicit statement of the moral law, you may ask how Great Britain, as a Christian nation, can, without an essential inconsistency, claim to be drawing the sword in the defence of Truth and Freedom.

My answer is that the whole structure of human society is based on the theory that Truth and Freedom can only be defended by force. Hence prisons, law courts, policemen, judges and the entire machinery of the civil law, which presupposes physical force.

Fleets of Allies Control the Sea

BORDEAUX, Sept. 21.—The fleets of the allies control the Atlantic, Mediterranean and North Sea, according to an official Navy Department statement, published today in the Moniteur de la Flotte.

RUIN OF CATHEDRAL PROTESTED TO U. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The protest of the French republic against what is considered the wanton destruction of the beautiful cathedral of Rheims by the Germans was cabled to the French Embassy by Foreign Minister Delcasse at Bordeaux today to be transmitted to the State Department. The official statement reads:

From the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the French republic to the French Ambassador, Washington:

BORDEAUX, Sept. 20, 1914.—Without the possibility of even the shadow of a military necessity being invoked, and for the mere pleasure of causing destruction, the German troops have submitted the Cathedral of Rheims to a relentless and systematic bombardment. At the present moment this famous Gothic edifice is nothing but a heap of ruins.

It is a duty for the government of the French republic to submit to the judgment of the world such a revolting act of vandalism, which, while consigning to the flames this sanctuary of French national history, deprives mankind of a unique part of its artistic patrimony.

(Signed) DELCASSE.

Ambassador Jusserand conveyed the message to the State Department today.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 21.—According to dispatches to the War Office the Germans fired deliberately against the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Rheims and other imposing and historic buildings from which no French artillery fire was issuing.

The Cathedral of Notre Dame had been turned into a hospital and a Red Cross flag was flying from the roof. Inside were about 500 wounded German prisoners.

The first shots shattered the windows and fragments of glass fell in showers upon the wounded soldiers who lay on bundles of straw in the aisles. It soon became apparent that the Germans were making a target of the cathedral.

Four hundred inhabitants of the town are reported to have been killed by German shell fire. All day Friday and Saturday and Sunday the incessant cannonade went on.

The famous Cathedral of Notre Dame dates back to the thirteenth century. The kings of France were formerly crowned there.

Menier's Chateau Looted by Germans

PARIS, Sept. 21.—The magnificent chateau of M. Menier, the "chocolate" king, has been looted. All of the food, wine, silverware and clothing on the place was carried away by the Germans, who promised to pay at the end of the war. The famous collection of antique clocks was carried off as well as a number of ceramics.

La Grippe and Colds

In La Grippe and Colds, Anti-kamnia (A-K) Tablets are unexcelled, as they stop the pains, soothe the nerves, and bring the rest so greatly needed by nature to restore the system to health. Physicians have used these tablets for over 20 years, in the treatment of colds, fevers and in grippe, and have found no other remedy more useful in these conditions. Anti-kamnia Tablets are so inexpensive, so pleasant to take, so satisfactory in their results, and so useful in all conditions where there is pain, that A-K Tablets should always be kept in the house for the time of need. Many of our ablest physicians obtain perfect results in la grippe and colds, by cleansing the system with Epsom salts or "Acrolds," a very good cathartic, putting the patient on a limited diet, and administering one A-K Tablet every two or three hours. This treatment will usually break up the worst case in a day or two, while milder cases, ease and comfort follow almost immediately. These tablets are also unexcelled for Neuralgia, Rheumatic Pains, The Pains of Women, Indigestion and Insomnia. All druggists have them.

Genuine A-K Tablets bear the AK mark.

TWO TWELVE-ROUND BOUTS AS DOUBLE WIND-UP FOR FANS AT ATLAS TOMORROW NIGHT

MURPHY MEETS LUSTIG IN GO AT ATLAS A. A.

By JACK CONWAY.

THERE will be a double window at the Atlas A. A. tomorrow night. Two twelve-round bouts have been arranged and the "fans" should witness plenty of fast, scientific boxing and some real hard hitting. Eddie Murphy, the South Boston boxer, and Johnny "Young" Lustig, the international New York lightweight, who has made such a name starring in the ring for Uncle Sam's colors in this country, will clash in the semi-event of twelve rounds. Young Jasper of the North End Social Club and Mickey Shea have been matched to box will exchange punches in the main session of twelve frames.

The Murphy-Lustig encounter aroused considerable interest among fistic lovers. Murphy is a clever boxer and a hard hitter, but he has lacked ring generalship and has not seen as much fighting as some of his opponents. Lustig is a veteran of many battles and has been boxing for years. Lustig is a veteran of many battles and has been boxing for years. He is a clever boxer and a hard hitter, but he has lacked ring generalship and has not seen as much fighting as some of his opponents.

Murphy realizes that he will have to win from Lustig if he is to retain his position in the lead in which he is being driven. If he loses to Joe Mosiani, too, he will be placed at the end of the line and Mosiani will handle No. 1. Pushed to the front is the reward for victory and a great deal depends on the outcome.

LUSTIG does not lack backers, there are many close followers of the active boxer who believe that he will be able to stretch his present skill still further and go a long way. The New Yorker is an excellent boxer as proved by his recent victory over Terry Brooks and by his triumph over Monty Bedell, who, by the way, is a friend of Murphy's. In fact, one of the reasons why Murphy is not the most popular boxer among the fans outside of the ring is because he has refused to meet some opponent's friends. Murphy has been matched a few times, but he has always found some reason why he could not box. Murphy claims he is better at other weights, but if he does he is the only one. Joseph, however, is willing to support Murphy at any weight, and if he is matter of fact the Braves, ever since they started their climb to the top, have been just as good away from home as they have in Boston.

BRAVES IN FINE FORM FOR GARRISON FINISH

Of the twenty games left on the Boston schedule, eleven will be played at Fenway Park and the remaining nine in New York and Brooklyn, five with the Giants and four with the Dodgers at the tail end of the season.

FIGURES FAVOR BRAVES.

For the present week's battling the percentage favors the Braves. Judging by what has gone before, Boston meets Pittsburgh twice, and five battles lasted with the Reds in three days and against the Cubs in a double-header Saturday.

The Giants play the Cubs today and tomorrow, entertain the scrappy Cardinals the next three days, opening the series with a double-header, then meet the Pirates twice on Saturday.

In the games played to date, here's how the two leaders have made out with the opponents of the next six days:

BOSTON.	W.	L.	P.C.
Pirates	15	5	.750
Reds	10	7	.588
Cubs	12	6	.667
Total	37	18	.673
NEW YORK.
Cubs	13	7	.650
Cardinals	8	10	.444
Pirates	10	7	.588
Total	31	24	.564

Consequently, the Braves, playing better ball each day, should have easier sport this week than has been their lot since their great uplift movement was inaugurated by that greatest of reformers, Miracle Man Stallings. Pirates, Reds and Cubs have all been easy of late.

The Giants, on the other hand, found the Cubs hard to beat Saturday, even though the best New York pitcher, Tesreau, was working, and are likely to find them just as tough in the next couple of days.

The Cardinals have the edge for the year against the one-time leaders. Roseher has his argumentative athletes fighting like New York politicians and the Giants more or less discouraged now by their inability to get up any closer to the Braves, may find the series the stumbling block on which they will trip and fall out of the race. Not wishing them any hard luck, we hope so.

HAVE GREAT RECORD.

If the Braves are to meet the Mackmen, they will be much better fitted for a hard fight if they can sort of ease up during the last few games of the year.

What the Climbers have done since the game home tied up with New York on Labor Day stamps them as easily the best team in the league.

In all, they have played fifteen games, of which they won eleven, lost three and tied one. The figures are:

	W.	L.	T.
Giants	3	1	0
Phillies	4	1	0
Brooklyn	2	1	0
Cardinals	2	0	1
Totals	11	3	1

The Giants in the same time have fallen back the three games which the leaders now have on them, as follows:

	W.	L.
Braves	1	2
Phillies	2	3
Brooklyn	2	3
Reds	3	6
Cubs	0	1
Totals	8	5

All in all, the cards for the Braves now coasting along on the final burst of speed, looks very good. Since they went over to New York for that well-known three-day series in the middle of August, six and a half games to the bad, and made the entire baseball world, as well as the fans of Boston take them seriously by winning all three contests, the heroes of the greatest fight in history have played thirty-one games.

WHAT MAY HAPPEN TODAY.

If the Braves win and the Giants lose, the Braves will lead the league by four games.

If the Braves win and the Giants win, the Braves will hold their present lead of three games.

If the Braves lose and the Giants win, the Braves' lead will be reduced to two games.

If the Braves lose and the Giants lose, the present three-game margin will still hold good.

They have won twenty-three and lost but eight. This is good enough going to suit anybody, except, of course, New Yorkers.

2 TO 1 FAVORITES.

Betting on the finish of the National race has been in quiet down, as the Braves' showing has made it almost a certainty that the Giants will not be able to get back to the front.

When the teams met at Fenway Park Labor Day they tied up for the limit, the betting here and in New York was even money and twice your pick. As the Braves have slowly but surely opened up a gap, the odds on them have grown.

Ten to nine on Boston after the Giants had been beaten two out of three, they shifted quickly to ten to eight when Brooklyn succeeded in breaking even with the former champs, while the Braves were walloping the Phillies.

The manner in which the latter outfit downed New York while Brooklyn was being beaten in this part of the country, caused the surest thing in the league to drop from 10 to 8, with very little money in sight.

As the Braves have kept on winning regularly, the rating has increased, till today 2 to 1 and 10 to 4 are being offered, with only a chance taker here and there.

ODDS ON ATHLETICS.

If the National race as a betting proposition is losing interest, the World's series speculation is beginning to boom. At present the Athletics are being made favorites, the price most frequently quoted being 3 to 4, no matter who wins the National race.

Plenty of money is being placed in Boston at those odds, though most of those willing to take a chance on the Braves are holding off for longer prices, which may come before the big crush is started.

More than one Boston plunger is willing to take a chance on the pitching ability of James, Rudolph, Tyler and Davis, as against the tremendous hitting power of the Mackmen.

The betting a year ago, just previous to the Grand-Athletic clash found the eventual winners favorites at 6 to 5.

RED SOX AFTER CLEAN SWEEP IN TIGERS' SERIES

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 21.—With two games already tucked away, Manager Carrigan and his band of Red Sox are out to clean up the series with the Tigers and this in spite of the fact that they still have two more games to play.

The double-header yesterday was easy sailing for the Boston boys, winning the first, 10 to 2, and the second 7 to 2.

In the opener Reynolds was driven from the mound in the first inning, while Main and Dubuc, who followed in order, were treated to an exhibition of heavy artillery fire.

In the second game "Red" Oldham, whom Mentor Nardi and Jennings retained when the Providence club was disposed of and who has won his last two starts, one against Chicago and once against Cleveland, was on the mound. He was unhittable.

When the Red Sox ill-covered this fact, they calmly stood by their arms and awaited transportation, which was freely issued, and resulted in a victory, with only four hits showing in the box score.

Oldham established two records for the local field, one for a long distance fly, while Cobb

"Every Dog Has His Day!"

By NELL BRINKLEY

AND hope springs eternal in the young chap's harried breast—for he thinks moodily as he watches the girl he has taken to building his future around nestle her pinky chin in her dog's shaggy collar like a pink rose in a powder-puff, watches her pet four-footed brother with all the little endearments and soft-talk that might be coming he-ward.

"Never mind, old top—it's your turn now—but wait! Oh, wait. For a reliable old bit of philosophy announces calmly that 'every dog has his day' and this dog will get his, too, if Dan will only smile. And when I'm engaged—engaged to her—engaged to a rainbow and a rose, if you please—you have my pity and my best love—for you will never get near any more not in the whole course of your doggy life.

"She will forget that your brown eyes glisten anywhere in the world—at least for a little while. 'Every dog has his day'—so grin, old chap, with coral tongue and wolf teeth and envy the luxury of her petting—for it won't last."—NELL BRINKLEY

Edith's Father Learns from Her that Ralph Had a Whip in His Auto

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER LVII.

"EDITH," John Hale said at dinner on the evening after his interview with Tom Morton, "I want to talk with you in the library when Ned Dayton goes away. For" with a quizzical smile, "I suppose he is coming tonight as usual?"

"Yes, I think he is," the girl stammered, blushing. "You don't mind, do you?"

"Oh, no," her father replied. "I suppose there must always be some one who is attentive to you. I should think you would get weary of it after a while."

While speech showed that he did not understand his daughter, however, Edith only laughed and blushed again.

"I did get tired of the others," she acknowledged, "but I don't of Ned."

"That is—not yet," her father replied dryly.

It was not of Edward Dayton that he spoke when she joined him in the library, later in the evening. John Hale had intimated to his wife that he would like to see his daughter alone, and the mother, thinking that he wanted to question Edith about her latest love affair, withdrew with some trepidation and many hopes that he would let "the poor child" follow the dictates of her heart. "For she did not love either Tom or Ralph," the matron reflected as she made ready for bed. "And if Ned is the man she does love—why not let her have her own way?"

The pair downstairs were not talking of love. Seriously and dispassionately, John Hale explained to Edith his reasons for thinking that Constance had held no communication with Tom Morton except in reply to his telegram, the contents of which Tom himself had told him this afternoon. Tom had also repeated to Mr. Hale, as nearly as he could remember it, Constance's reply to that telegram. Edith was much interested. Although the details brought back to her distinctly her two former love episodes, she did not seem embarrassed by the recollection. She would have said that she was not foolishly sensitive in such matters—a statement which no one who knew her could deny.

EDITH HAS NO ILL WILL TOWARD CONSTANCE

Nor, now that it was all over, did she cherish any animosity against Constance, but was quite ready to believe that Ralph had exaggerated in saying that her cousin was untrustworthy.

"I know very well that he can lie when it suits him!" she informed her father, showing heated resentment for the only time during the conversation. For a fleeting instant she remembered Ralph's sudden fury to her and the sore spot in her vanity was touched by the recollection.

"How do you know?" her father questioned.

"I would rather not tell you, Dad," she said. "When a thing is disagreeable I try to forget it as soon as possible."

Her father looked at her thoughtfully, appreciating that she had uttered a pregnant truth about her own character. She would not think of painful matters, nor would she do anything that would bring her discomfort. The parent chided himself for thinking of the proverb "light come, light go" in connection with his daughter. She was but a child—yet how lightly children could play with hearts!

He turned his thoughts quickly into a different channel.

"There are one or two other things I want to ask you, little girl," he observed. "Try to tell me all that Ralph said when he stopped to see you on his way home on the night of Tom's accident."

She told him all that she could remember, but if threw no light on the problem that was puzzling him.

"He was alone, wasn't he?" the father asked.

"Oh, yes—entirely alone. And he stopped for only a few minutes or so."

"Did he have any parcels—or anything in his runabout that would have shown where he had been?"

"No," Edith replied, "but he said he had been to the drug store. I did not look for any parcels—though he may have had some in his car. But there was nothing there—I think"—she stopped, frowning, trying to recall an elusive memory—"except—Oh, yes, I remember now, for it seemed such a funny thing to carry in an automobile! I saw a tassel sticking out so I looked to see what it was on, and I saw it was a long, curled-up horsewhip."

"Ah!"

The ejaculation was so sudden and vehement that the girl started violently. "Why, Dad," she exclaimed, "What's the matter?"

"Nothing," he said, quickly. "Nothing at all. That's enough now, dear. Run away to bed."

JOHN HALE CANNOT USE THE SUDDEN EVIDENCE

John Hale sat long, thinking out the chain of evidence that seemed to have been laid ready to his hand. At the end of an hour he sighed impatiently.

"And I can't use it!" he regretted. "Tom made me promise not to talk to anybody about his affairs. If I tell him the facts which I have learned, or which I suspect, he'll do nothing about it. Perhaps"—with a sudden inspiration—"he knows or suspects it all already."

Many surprising suggestions had come to this elderly man during the past few hours, and another one presented itself at this moment.

"I wonder," he exclaimed as the vivid idea took form before his mental vision, "I wonder if that's why Ralph took his mother away—because Tom is getting well and the scoundrel is afraid of him! Well, Ralph's fooled us all, and now he's gone. Even if he had stayed we couldn't punish him without hurting his mother. That's always the way with the rascals in this world—there's always a mother, or wife, or some other innocent person, who'll be worse hurt than the guilty ones if they get what they deserve!"

He was silent for a while. Then he sighed again and rose to his feet.

"And poor old Tom has had it all to bear alone, and there's nothing I can try. And if I'm not mistaken that's the biggest kindness I could do for him. For, if I know the signs on a man's face, and I think I do, Tom loves Constance. I had hoped that Edith would take him, and I know he thought he loved her; yet"—with a shake of his head—"he never had the look about his mouth when he spoke of Edith that he had when he talked to me of Constance today."

Quite Obvious

Luck is a curious thing—a thing which cannot often be explained. But it can be sometimes.

Swivler was a perfect terror to the people in the card room of the Fyekan Hotel, especially the poker players. He couldn't lose. Fascinated by his luck, and with an unholy desire to beat him, people played with Swivler, and Swivler went on winning.

On the other hand—and this is where the luck comes in—he could not find the winner of a race anyhow. In fact, no horse that he had backed had ever been known to be anything but an "also ran."

One night, after he had been particularly lucky at poker, the talk turned to this curious state of things.

"It's very funny, Mr. Swivler," said a fair young thing, "that you can't get any luck racing; yet you're lucky at cards."

Swivler felt confidential.

"Well, you see," he said, smiling blandly, "I can't shuffle the horses!"

Willie's Confession

Little Willie had been very naughty. So much so that his mother was at last forced to severely punish him.

When his father arrived home in the evening he at once noticed that Willie's eyes were suspiciously red.

"What's the matter, sonny?" he cried.

"Oh, nothing," responded Willie.

"Come, don't be frightened," said the father in coaxing tones. "Tell me about it; I want to know."

Willie remained silent for some time; then he suddenly burst out:

"Well, if you must know, I've had a thundering row with your wife."

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

SEPTEMBER 1.—It is three weeks, Friend Diary, since I have set down the events in the march of days. Perhaps that is because things were rushing so fast that I could not keep up with them.

Sally and I were shut up on the little Gladonia for two weeks making the trip from England to Canada, and two weeks of close companionship on an old fashioned little boat are bound to have some effect on a friendship. I think that trip had the fortune definitely and forever to arrange my relations with Sally. We were three days from land, and all through the first ten days of our voyage, I had avoided any tete-a-tetes with the impressionable widow, but it came at last when every one went below to avoid a heavy gale that seemed to be blowing out from the Banks.

"Max, the only way I can avoid being deathly sick is to keep up on deck—will you walk about a bit with me this evening?" asked Mrs. Spencer point blank as we sat at dinner.

Of course I consented. Diary, I feel like a cad when I see myself writing down that I "consented" to take a promenade with a woman! But facts "is" facts.

The spray from the sea lashed up over the deck and set its moisture on Sally's flying hair as we walked about over and over the compass of the small boat's promenade deck. She was so close to me that I could detect the jasmine scent she uses above all the salt tang of the sea. And as Sally clung to me I could feel the warm clasp of her arm through the chilling cold of the mist.

"I think you are as cold as the sea itself," she said mutinously, and then she added bitterly: "It's always my luck to care for men like that—slaves to duty, or an ideal—or something!"

"Come, Sally, you've never really cared for anyone but old Jack—have you?" I asked lightly in the hope of getting the conversation on a safe footing.

"Jack! I thought I cared for him when I married him—but inside of a year I hated him! Why, Max, he never kissed me a cent unless I begged him for it and explained just why I wanted it. He made me account for every penny, and somehow when my own husband treated me like a beggar and thief for money, those characteristics came to be part of me—and I began to beg and steal the thing I really cared for."

"Come, Sally—you're tired and hysterical. You never begged or stole anything, I'm sure," I insisted.

"How about you, Max? Didn't I beg for your love—and didn't you refuse it?" asked Sally, daringly.

"No—no—I—you," began to flounder while my face burned through all the mist and I felt for all the world like a blushing debutante.

Some impulse of daring and some insane desire to "confess" seized Sally and she told me the strangest little bit of history I have ever had to fit into a part-told tale.

"I stole another woman's husband," she said calmly. "I met him just after his marriage, and I felt that his big generous nature would give all that Jack's miserly selfishness denied me. I knew him first in a business way. Then he began to grow interested in my case—for I told him that I had to make money since I couldn't go down on my knees to my husband for it. I began to confide in him—and I got so I'd call him up at his own home to tell him my troubles.

"Pretty soon he got to taking me out to lunches and teas to talk over my investments—and when I found out that his wife was jealous I hugged the thought that I was hurting her even as I was hurt. But I never got him to really care—he was only sorry for me! And then, oh, Max—Max, she divorced him. It all happened out West and no one knows the part I played in their case. But he's never looked at me from that day to this. And sometimes I feel as if I could kill Josephine, for the despicable part I played in her life. Now you know the worst of me, Max—and I suppose you'll never look at me again?"

"You poor little thing," I said pityingly the weakness that drove Sally to steal from others what she could not hope to gain for herself—peace. But my greatest pity was for poor, proud Josephine, who had left her husband, Sidney Darrow, and in her bereavement over the loss of her little girl, Sidonia, had only her interest in my little niece to console her.

And ever since my return I have been sitting in a bond office playing at earning my salary and trying to think out a way to be worth something to Darrow in bringing about a reconciliation with his wife.

I have left Manette with Josephine, for the wholesome, outdoor life has made the child grow and expand into the most graceful healthy girlhood and I mean to let her stay until school opens.

And in the meantime there is the thought of Josephine, who probably is grieving over Darrow even while Sally mourns because she was never able to win him.

In the meantime I shall be very nice to Maid Marian—the poor child looks as if she needed a bit of consoling.

(In the next instalment Max finds that Manette is "Sweet Sixteen" and almost a young lady.

The Wedding Ceremony

By ANN LISLE

A NUMBER of girls have written to ask questions about their approaching weddings. So, perhaps, the October bride and all the little brides-to-be will be grateful for a general answer to their questions.

A wedding should not be an affair of show and lavish gorgeousness. It should not be a time of ostentation and elaborate decorations. It ought to be a sacred ceremony, suggesting that loveliest of wedding music, "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden." Sweetness, sacredness, solemnity—these three words give the keynote of the properly impressive wedding.

As for clothes, the rule is simple for bride, bridegroom or attendant. Wear clothes that would be suitable for any function timed as is the wedding. A morning wedding is best dressed in formal street attire. An afternoon wedding needs the formal afternoon clothes that would be worn at an afternoon reception. And for the evening wedding a white-clad bride is met by a bridegroom in dress clothes that are the proper foil for her own.

The bride's attendants give the note of color in the procession when she is white-clad. In the evening they are gowned in low-necked dresses of soft colorings and seldom wear hats.

If the afternoon bride elects to be married in white, the bridegroom still wears formal afternoon reception dress—a cutaway coat, gray trousers, gay ascot (four-in-hand) and gray gloves. His best man and ushers are similarly dressed, and generally wear cloth-topped boots, silk hats and add the decoration of a white flower in their coats.

At the afternoon wedding, the bridesmaids and maid of honor may wear hats even if the bride is veiled.

If there are little flower girls or pages, they may be two and two or two flower girls and one page or vice-versa, as the bride chooses.

The wedding is particularly the bride's grand occasion, so a considerate bridegroom will let her choose her own attendants. By the same token, a sweet and gracious bride will not slight any members of his family and will attempt to include in her procession his sister as either maid of honor or bridesmaid if he has a sister of suitable age.

A married sister of either may act as matron of honor. If neither has a married sister the bride may choose for this position any dear friend or relative she chooses to honor. The matron, like the maid of honor, is generally a rather young woman.

The ushers head the wedding procession, clearing the way for the bride's attendants. After them come bridesmaids, honor maid, and then little pages, or flower girls, strewing flower petals in the path of his bride.

The bride enters on the arm of her father, or that male relative who is acting as her guardian and giving her away. The bridegroom and his best man have previously entered by some side path and stand at the altar waiting for the bride.

The best man has the ring in readiness for the bridegroom. The maid of honor holds the bride's bouquet and throws back her veil at the conclusion of the ceremony.

The wedding is given by the bride's parents or something of the sort must be expected. The bride's mother, however, sends the bride her flowers.

Temptation

When prices of raw material soar, the temptation to adulterate in manufacture is hard for some to resist.

Peroxide of Hydrogen costs twice as much to make as it did before August.

Dioxogen

(The Pure Peroxide of Hydrogen)

has always been made pure and stable and sold at a fair price, which price has not been advanced.

You know (by experience) that common peroxide soon spoils, turns rank and bitter and varies in strength.

The name Dioxogen is your guarantee—reputation and character are back of it. When you ask for Dioxogen by name and get it you know you are always getting Dioxogen purity, strength and stability. Buy a bottle today.

In Girlhood—Womanhood and Motherhood

The prescription which Dr. R. V. Pierce uses most successfully—in diseases of women—which has stood the test of nearly half a century—is

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Take this in liquid or tablet form as a tonic and regulator!

Mrs. Kate D. Richardson, of Beazley, Essex Co., Va., says, "I esteem it a pleasure to testify to the wonderful curative qualities of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For some years I suffered greatly with weakness, peculiar to my sex. I was treated by several physicians but gradually grew worse. One of my friends told me of the good results of your "Favorite Prescription," I went to the drug store and got a bottle, and after taking it, with the "Pleasant Pellets," I commenced to get better. I never knew what happiness was, for I was always sick and complaining and made others as well as myself unhappy. So you see what a debt I owe you!"

The Wise Old Miller

knows there are as many grades and kinds of Corn Flakes as there are grades and kinds of flour.

To tell the best—the kind that affords the biggest money's worth and most satisfaction to the consumer—is easy for the old miller or food expert.

But the purchaser who doesn't know, must be protected. That is why the producers of the very finest Corn Flakes didn't call them "Jone's Corn Flakes" or "Smith's Corn Flakes."

These Superior Corn Flakes were given a name that is distinctive—

Post Toasties

The average housekeeper has, likely enough, tried some of the various "Corn Flakes" on the market. To realize the perfection of taste in toasted Indian corn—cooked, rolled and seasoned with sugar and salt just as it ought to be—one should order Post Toasties.

These famous Corn Flakes have been the favorite for years among chefs and food connoisseurs. They come ready to eat in sealed packages with an Inside Container that keeps this delicious food crisp, fresh and clean for the table. And the price is no higher than the cost of ordinary kinds.

Insist on your grocer supplying the Superior Corn Flakes—

U. S. RECORD PROSPERITY PREDICTED

By W. H. ROSS.
Financial Editor.

There is more discussion each day of what may be done to enable stock exchanges to reopen with safety, but so far resumption efforts are confined to proposals and the talk they inspire. It is felt, however, that talk voices the need and that it will not be long before something will be attempted. It is said that a very heavy over-subscription of the New York City 6 per cent $100,000,000 note issue is now certain. Should that be approved by the Federal Reserve Board of a gold pool to guard the $100,000,000 to liquidate this country's foreign debts are the most important of recent financial events. The gold will be sent to Ottawa, subject to Bank of England order, and it is believed the first call will be for not more than $25,000,000. The gold will be classified in banks in the reserve system.

William Hargreaves says: "The United States should enjoy an era of unprecedented prosperity as the result of the European war. It should place New York City the financial centre of the world."

Grain prices advanced today when the Chicago market opened.

MORE HOPE FOR ROADS.

The decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission to reopen the western freight rate case next month and the general conditions that the business situation is going to basically improve. Rightly or wrongly it is believed the arbiters will act more promptly on the roads' latest petition than they did on the first one. There is more hope than when the previous decision was pending that carriers will be granted what they ask. Meanwhile the steel and allied industries are suffering because of hand-to-mouth equipment buying by the transportation corporations. August orders by the latter were at the annual rate of only 52,800 cars, 95% per cent of rolls and 19 locomotives. Informal times, at a minimum, the roads should buy 150,000 cars, 1,750,000 tons of rails and 2,000 locomotives. Not much more equipment buying is expected this year, but large orders will be placed by the roads in 1915 if they are permitted to increase revenues.

WESTERN ROADS AND THE CANAL.

Transcontinental roads will soon face competition from the opening because of the completion of the Panama Canal. Barly next month the Interstate Commerce Commission will begin hearings on a petition for a readjustment of its decision denying the long-and-short haul privilege to Pacific coast points. Under the latter decision lake and river rates for a great part of the Missouri valley territory are the immediate points. From San Francisco to Chicago the rail freight rate is as much as a hundred per cent. The water rate by way of the canal to New York and Chicago is fifty-nine cents.

LARGER LOANS ON REAL ESTATE.

It is stated that larger loans are being made on real estate in New York and this is accompanied by an improvement in the mortgage situation generally. Many, in fact, expect that the coming trade has felt the effect of the war, and that money market conditions will turn for no other reason. Doubtless there will turn for no other reason. Doubtless there will be a revival of stock exchange business subsequent to the resumption of business activities. The American people never are long depressed, and more than all previous ones are going to make an extraordinary effort to overcome the present depression as a result of the European war because it amounts to nothing less.

All Boston playgoers are traveling "The Road to Happiness" along with William Hodge at the Wilbur Theatre these days, but the happiest actors in the piece are, perhaps, the quartet known behind the scenes as Mr. Hodge's "Happy Family." This quartet consists of an old white horse, a hen, a bird and beautiful dog named "Shep." All four take a modest part in the scenes of the play and they have nothing else to worry them, being provided with every comfort possible while not performing their professional duties.

"The most important of them in the play is the old horse, named "Senator." He is certainly an "Old Roman." His age and generally broken-down appearance is heightened in the drama by the make-up. His ribs are painted and his body so adorned that to look twice as emaciated as he does in his proper state.

One of his legs is bandaged to represent a spavined condition, and when old Farmer Phil rides him in, mounted on his back alongside a saddle-bag, the roars that go up every night testify to the enthusiastic appreciation of this equine comedian. It took a long time for Mr. Hodge to discover just the right horse to play this role of Senator. There were a host of candidates. A number of comical steeds were accepted before the present Senator was found. Tradition says he was at one time a street car horse in Philadelphia.

Almost as great a veteran as this old horse is the rider who strides him in the play, Mr. Evans. It is the name of this actor who has been on the stage for more than half a century. He began his footlight career in Louisville during the Civil War days, and he was later an actor in the stock company of the Boston Theatre in Louisville when Mary Anderson made her first appearance on any stage there as Julie de Mirac. Evans makes a delightful character bit out of kindly old Farmer Phil, who believes the horse, if not human, to be "nearly human." He is really fond of the old white horse, and the bird and the hen chum with this horse and even the dog, Shep, takes kindly to him, so much they are known, as has been said, as the "Happy Family."

Gov. Walsh Endorses Peter F. Tague's DEMOCRACY

On the 16th of June at the Bunker Hill Day Banquet in Charlestown Governor David I. Walsh said:

"I am pleased to take this opportunity to express my appreciation of the valuable service one of your members, Peter F. Tague, has rendered to the Democratic party and my administration as a member of the Massachusetts Legislature. Loyal to every principle for which the administration is battling, Peter F. Tague is a leader who does credit and honor to his constituency. His voice, splendid energy and ability have been at my service from the outset, and whatever my administration may accomplish in the way of helpful and progressive legislation due credit for same must be given to the leadership of Peter Tague. Indeed, if I had 25 Peter Tagues we would get anything the party desired in the Legislature."

As against this stands the record of John A. Keliher, who, though elected as a Democrat, served the big interests by acting as a willing tool of the Republican leaders. Here is a part of the record:

Mr. Keliher Voted Against Postal Savings Banks.

Mr. Keliher Voted Against Pure Food Bill.

Mr. Keliher Voted Against Larger Naval Appropriation.

Mr. Keliher Voted Against Ocean Mail Bill, which if a law today would give us control of the seas.

Mr. Keliher Voted Against Anti-Injunction Bill,

And Voted for Joe Cannon, Stand-Pat Republican, for Speaker of the House.

Repudiate the Joe Cannon Democrat by Voting for the Walsh Democrat

How the Railroads Have Managed Their Expense Accounts

They Must Devise Some New Plan. What Will It Be? Government Ownership the Only REAL Plan

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

The railroads ask permission to increase their freight rates. If they get the permission that, of course, will not satisfy the needs of such men as the managers of the New Haven, the Rock Island and other enterprises.

The few men who have managed railroads intelligently and honestly are buried out of sight under the great gang of Wall Street speculators and railroad wreckers.

You do not, perhaps, know how the "financing of railroads" has been managed in the past.

We shall tell you.

In an ordinary business a man takes part of his profits to build up the business, extend it, make repairs, keep up the stock.

Not so with the railroads.

The railroads have taken their money TO PAY DIVIDENDS AND PUT UP THE PRICE OF SECURITIES.

When they have needed new money for any purpose, new terminals, new railroad stations, new engines, THEY HAVE ISSUED NEW SECURITIES.

Millions, tens of millions, hundreds of millions, THOUSANDS OF MILLIONS, the railroads have printed in the way of securities, bonds, stocks, preferred stocks, etc.

There has never been any idea of taking part of the profits to keep up the road, extend it, and make it possible for the road to render good service at a fair price.

Whatever came in the way of apparent profit was given to the stockholders, usually with an arrangement to permit Wall Street insiders to profit every time a dividend was increased.

Whatever was needed for betterment or upkeep was got as long as it could be done by selling new bonds or stock.

If the roads had used their profits FOR THE RAILROADS instead of handing them out to stockholders or speculators they would not now be begging for the right to charge constantly increased rates.

The sorrow of the railroads is based upon the fact that they have come to an end of their ordinary borrowing power, or, rather, to an end of the market for stocks and bonds that had no limit.

Bankers and purchasers are afraid of these railroad stocks that drop from $110 a share to $10 a share over night. They are particularly afraid of stocks like the New Haven that get into the hands of eminently respectable gentlemen—and are gutted shamefully.

The latest device of the railroads, now also worn out, was this:

They declared very big dividends. Paid stockholders seven, eight, nine and ten per cent., even though they did not earn it.

They put the price of stock up to $140 or $150 or above $200.

Then, when they needed money, they simply said that as a great favor to stockholders they were going to allow them to buy some new stock at par.

When they hold stock worth $140 in the market or $170, of course they gladly take the new stock at $100.

And in that way many hundreds of millions have been taken in by the sharpers called financiers.

But that is wearing out.

And the system of short-term notes is also wearing out.

When they could no longer sell bonds or stocks or keep up the false appearance of big dividends and issue stock at par as a "favor," the railroads began borrowing as an irresponsible business man does, giving short-term notes at a high rate of interest—and shaving a good deal off of the principal for the benefit of the bankers.

Those notes are coming home to roost.

The question is now, WHAT CAN THE RAILROADS DO?

Of course, if they can persuade the public to pay constantly more for freight and to pay more for mileage and more for commutation and more for single tickets, that will help for a while.

The fact is, and the railroad men know it, that nothing will help an institution which disburses or steals ALL THAT IT TAKES IN, and borrows money to pay its running expenses.

That the railroads of the United States have DONE.

In doing it they have got themselves into a position where nothing will save them, EXCEPT A FRANK CONFESSION OF THE FACT THAT THEY ARE ON THE ROCKS, THAT THEY CANNOT OR WILL NOT MANAGE THEIR PROPERTY HONESTLY, THAT IT WOULD DO NO GOOD TO GIVE THEM THE CHANCE TO TAKE IN A FEW MORE HUNDRED MILLIONS.

AND THAT THE ONLY THING THAT WILL SAVE THE SITUATION IS GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP OF THE RAILROADS, government management for the benefit of the people, instead of private management for the benefit of speculators and insiders.

There is no escape from government ownership, and the biggest railroad men know it.

You can't spend your total income year after year and borrow and add to your debt the sums that you should have SAVED from income and keep out of bankruptcy.

The quicker the railroads make up their minds to suggest to the government some fair plan of government ownership, based upon reasonable compensation, the more intelligently they will avoid the future day when the public may not be so much in the mood to consider fairness and fair rates—where fairness has been so universally missing in railroad treatment of the public.

A Faithful Public Servant

One of the finest Congressmen which Massachusetts has known in recent years is John J. Mitchell of Marlboro. As a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives and Senate he attracted public attention and public approval by his unusually faithful service.

He has twice carried Republican districts and has not in any respect disappointed those who confided in him and fought for him. He is a splendid type of American citizen and public servant.

If all our public servants were one-half as faithful as Mr. Mitchell, or one-half of them were wholly as faithful, we should have less to criticize and less to mend in our government, State and National.

Mr. Mitchell's district ought not to be satisfied with merely renominating and re-electing him; it ought to INCREASE his plurality.

To Love and Run Away Sometimes Is Wise

The Man Who Is in No Position to Marry Does Only an Act of Justice to Extinguish the First Flare Up of Fancy

By DOROTHY DIX

A YOUNG man who is just starting his career, and who must succeed or fail according as he plays the game of life wisely or foolishly, has met a charming young woman to whom he is much attracted. He knows that he will fall head over heels in love with this girl if he is thrown much in her society, and he asks my advice as to the desirability of following up the acquaintance.

This young man is poor. He is in no position to marry. It will be years before he should think of such a thing as taking a wife, and, such being the case, he should avoid the temptation of falling in love just as assiduously as he should the chance of catching the smallpox.

Once upon a time, at a college commencement in a small town, I met a youth whom I knew sitting out in the moonlight alone, while all of his companions were dancing at the farewell hop. I asked him why he sought solitude, and he replied:

"Oh, I'm sitting out here to keep from making a fool of myself, because there's a girl in there that I know I'd propose to if I went in. You see I'm just sloshing over with sentiment and this good-by-to-the-old-days' stuff and sure as shooting I'd leave here an engaged man if I took another look in her violet eyes.

Engagement Millstone Is a Handicap in Life's Race

"Now, I figure it out that, with luck, it'll be ten years before I'll be in any fix to marry, and it's never seemed to me a square thing for a man to ask a woman to sit on the anxious seat that long. Besides, in ten years she will change, and I'll change, and we may not want each other. Anyway, I'm wise that the man who's got to run the race I have doesn't travel the faster for having the millstone of an engagement hanging around his neck, so behold me, Saint Anthony, resisting temptation."

"Good boy," I applauded, "he who loves and runs away will live to love another day."

So say I again to every youth who is dallying with the thought of love without the ability to make good. There are times when the only safety is in flight, and when a man's only protection from the arrows of Cupid is to get without their range. For, praise be a merciful Providence, the arrows of the little winged god are only effective when fired at short distances.

Love is like a fire. It is easy to stamp out, but hard to put out when it has reached the state of a conflagration. Therefore, the man who is in no position to marry does only an act of justice to himself and to the girl when he puts the extinguisher on the little flare up of fancy that shows him how easily the fire of love could sweep his heart.

Of course, it takes courage to turn one's back upon a charming lady, and to keep one's footsteps from taking one into the presence of the woman who draws one with a thousand subtle fascinations, but absence is the price of safety. Somehow love words say themselves in the presence of the beloved one. The man who never intended to pop the question finds himself on his knees beseeching the girl to marry him, and he who had sworn never to marry is led as a lamb before the altar.

There is no truer adage than that "a young man married is a young man marred," and of all the pathetic fools in existence, none is so pitiful as the boy who marries without money enough to support a family.

He sells himself into the worst form of slavery, for it is the slavery that does not even compel the master to provide for his wants. He works for wages that never quite meet the desperate and ever-growing needs at home, and he lives with the torturing fear ever eating at his heart of losing his job, however poor it may be, and wondering what would become of a wife and babies if he were laid off, or fell sick.

The marriage of two poor young creatures, for it is as hard on the girl as it is on the boy, is as sordid a tragedy as ever happened, and there should be some law that would prevent these poor little geese from wrecking their lives in the very beginning. We need to prevent early marriages as well as other forms of suicide.

"It Is Easier to Keep Out of Folly Than to Get Out"

Inasmuch as the matter is left to individual folly, however, the only way to avoid it is to keep away from sentimental entanglements, and, when a youth meets a girl that he particularly likes, to turn his attention in another direction, for love is like other temptations. It is easier to keep out of than to get out of.

When a man finds himself thinking of some particular pair of eyes, and wondering what some especial girl would say about everything that comes up, and speculating as to whether she really is as cunning as he thinks she is, then it's up to him to give absence a chance to do its great and perfect work, or else price wedding rings.

Those who play with fire are sure to get burnt.
